

Intra-familial child sexual abuse

One-day multi-agency training

“Sexual abuse has a devastating impact on childhoods and throughout life. We must work together to do everything we can to prevent sexual abuse, to protect children at risk of sexual abuse and to support children to recover from the significant harm that sexual abuse causes.”

Julie Morgan AM, Deputy Minister for Health & Social Services

This one-day training course will equip professionals across health, education, social care and policing with an understanding of:

- the scale and nature of child sexual abuse
- the challenges, myths and obstacles which can limit identification and response
- who commits intra-familial child sexual abuse
- how sexual abuse takes place in families
- understanding the child’s experience – the impact of abuse, signs and indicators of abuse and the barriers to disclosing it
- children’s disclosures and your role as a professional.

The training will support you to improve your understanding of child sexual abuse within the family environment, and help you to better identify signs and indicators and respond effectively to protect children.

Date: February 24th 2021 10am–4.30pm

This training will be delivered remotely using Teams – details to be confirmed.
